

Cryptic Keeper

By Mark Edgemon

The unknown is still unknown,
After a dissertation of knowledge has been disseminated;
Eliminated and understanding; terminated; dissipated.
Hope of acquired knowledge remains unfulfilled,
To be deciphered by fools who,
Would not obey or consider rich wisdom,
Even if they could extract its pearls.

But the gleeful will not be denied.
The outer shell still between their teeth,
They smile in pride, howbeit a toothless grin.
